Losing everything doesn't mean Remy's lost. Fred's been the bar manager at The Xxchange for a long time. He's seen servers come and go. With the bar revamped and turned into a more reputable club, the last person he ever expects to see walk in is Martine, a snarky booty-boy server who worked at The Xxchange years ago then just didn't show up one night. But Martine isn't really Martine—he's Remy, and always has been. To get hired at a place he could party and have fun in, Remy had previously lied about his age and got a fake ID. Then he got into a bad relationship, one based on money and a contract no one should ever have agreed on. After his parents commit a crime that lands Remy in trouble with his sugar daddy, Remy loses everything. The only place he can think of to turn to is The Xxchange, and the people he used to work for. If they'll just give him a chance to prove he can be a mature, responsible adult, he might end up no longer living on the streets. These two men come together first as rescuer and lost soul, then as friends. If there's going to be more than that, Remy wants them to be on an equal footing. He's learned his lesson about trying to find the easy way through life. But someone doesn't want him to have a chance at freedom or love...
