A hand omnipotent, in endless space, from chaos, formed a world and found a place, where, through countless ages, yet unborn, through numberless cosmic seconds, a star might shine from dusk to rosy morn. Great mountains rose, majestic in their might, and sun-filled gardens, aglow with mellow light, and rippling streams went purling through the darkened forests, to silver lakes that glistened in the shadows. A subtle fragrance filled each shifting breeze, the scent of flowers in bloom and budding trees. So beautiful the earth, in Nature's eyes, a soul was sent to dwell, in human guise, a form of god-like beauty and of might. To drink the sunshine and to dream at night, in those old days, when first the world began, strange visions came to Nature's first child, Man. Unclad and lone, he roved from spot to spot and longed and yearned for something which was not. Until, at last, a prayer went up to Heaven and Nature's noblest gift to man was given: a gentle, throbbing, trembling, beauteous maid, fair as the man, but with a softer shade, endowed with beauty and a thousand charms that sought the sheltering clasp of loving arms. Eve, with her basket, was deep in the bells and grass, wading in bells and grass up to her knees. Picking a dish of sweet berries and plums to eat, down in the bells and grass under the trees. Mute as a mouse in a corner the cobra lay, curled round a bough of the Cinnamon tall. Now to get even and humble proud heaven and now was the moment or never at all. "Eva!" Each syllable light as a flower fell, "Eva!" he whispered the wondering maid, soft as a bubble sung out of a linnet's lung, soft and most silverly "Eva!" he said. Picture that orchard sprite; Eve, with her body white, supple and smooth to her slim finger tips; wondering, listening, listening, wondering, Eve with a berry half-way to her lips. Oh, had our simple Eve seen through the make-believe! Had she but known the Pretender he was! Out of the boughs he came, whispering still her name, tumbling in twenty rings into the grass. Here was the strangest pair in the world anywhere, Eve in the bells and grass kneeling, and he telling his story low.... Singing birds saw them go down the dark path to The Blasphemous Tree. Oh, what a clatter when Titmouse and Jenny Wren saw him successful and taking his leave! How the birds rated him, how they all hated him! How they all pitied poor motherless Eve! Picture her crying outside in the lane, Eve, with no dish of sweet berries and plums to eat, haunting the gate of the orchard in vain.... Picture the lewd delight under the hill to-night— "Eva!" the toast goes round, "Eva!" again.
