Gothic Labyrinth P. F. Grazioli

Curiosity, fear, interest, the need to know, to discover what is responsible. What mystery attends the character in front of the dark cave with nothing to shine a light on but a lantern that timidly tries to break into the obscurity while fear and uncertainty stimulate the need to understand, to unveil, to penetrate into the unknown even if he might not like what hides within.

In any case he will find himself lost in a maze of gothic horrors that form the structure of “Gothic Labyrinth” where the reader will be involved and will try to make a light along the way with his own lantern. But, every single one of us owns a lantern that shines its own personal light and so everyone will light up the recesses of the Labyrinth in a different way. In fact every reader is the man with the lantern whose face we cannot see because he could be.... each one of us.
